

Mykonos Helps Companies Battle Hackers, Raises $4 Million

ROBIN WAUTERS

posted yesterday

Mykonos (<http://www.mykonossoftware.com/>) (the security software company, not the lovely Greek island) has secured (<http://www.marketwatch.com/story/mykonos-software-raises-4-million-in-series-a-funding-2012-01-23>) $4 million in a Series A funding round led by previous backer Tom Golisano, founder and chairman of Paychex.

New investors include Ironport founder Scott Banister, Jeff Clarke (executive chairman of Travelport, chairman of Orbitz and board member of Red Hat) and Mike Jones (founder and CEO of Clover Capital).

Mykonos's Web Security product uses deception to "detect, confuse, slow down and prevent attackers" in real-time in order to help companies protect their websites and Web apps from malicious hacker and proactively prevent fraud and theft.

Just recently, the company moved (<http://www.mykonossoftware.com/press/mediakit/2012-01-17-News-Release-Mykonos-Opens-New-San-Francisco-Office.pdf>) its headquarters to the heart of Silicon Valley – they also have offices in New York.

---